

Capt. Colin (CJB) Campbell RM

I joined the Corps for National Service and managed to talk them into giving me a General Service commission.

A Wren communicator fell for my charms and agreed to be my wife.

I specialised as an aviator, flying helicopters and fixed-wing in the Fleet Air Arm for twelve years.

I spent nine years with British Airways, flying helicopters on Oil-rig support.

Grounded for an un-diagnosed medical condition, my wife and I converted our Aberdeenshire lodge into a wee hotel (Fawlty Towers North East.)

We moved to Dartmouth, I regained my medical status and flew for seven years with Flybe from Exeter.

The medical problem returned, so we dedicated ourselves, in semi-retirement, to the hospitality sector.

My wife succumbed to The Big C in 2012. One of our daughters lives in Devon with our granddaughter and great grandson. The other lives in the Caribbean.
